

What I Am Really Going To Do

Famous-Author Socialist Now Democratic Standard-Bearer in California Explains His P.E.-I.C. Plan to the Nation

In the current issue of Liberty, dated October 20, appears the following article, which is reprinted below. It was first published in former articles by Upton Sinclair, published in this paper under the title of "I, Governor of California." In that series Upton Sinclair has told the story of his life and work in California. He is the author of what is now the famous EPIC plan, and the movement he has gained widespread attention all over Canada and the United States. To Liberty Magazine the following article is given full credit herewith. It may be purchased at all newsstands.—ED.

By UPTON SINCLAIR

CALIFORNIA is demanding its share of the New Deal, and is setting about to take it "regardless," as they say.

Our state has advantages of climate which make it a refuge for the homeless and destitute. A ranchwoman told me yesterday that she had been feeding hungry men for four years, and the last seven per cent of them had wandered in from other states. Perhaps that explains why we have a million and a quarter of our population dependent upon public charity. Every four persons in California have to carry an idle person on their backs, and the backs are beginning to break. In spite of a sales tax which takes one cent from the poor every time they buy 15 cents worth of food, the state now has a $30,000,000 deficit, and it will be close to $100,000,000 by the end of this year.

That means more taxes, and already a large percentage of our people have lost their homes and ranches to the state or to the banks. Discontent is spreading among all classes, and the public temper is close to boiling point. We have strikes among our farm workers, ruthlessly put down; and as I write blood is flowing in the streets of San Francisco.

Political Movement Spreads

To meet this situation there has arisen a political movement having for its slogan, "End Poverty in California." From the first letters of these words it calls itself the EPIC movement. It has spread to every corner of the state with a speed which has amazed old-time politicians. Its beginning was a book entitled I, Governor of California, and How I Ended Poverty. In eight months there have been sold 180,000 copies of this book, which makes it the best seller in the history of the state.

The same writer is offering himself for governor on this program. The job of being a state administrator is the last I would choose for myself. It is not in accord with my talents, and only a deep sense of the crisis confronting not merely California but the world has brought me out of the garden where I have been writing my books.

CHEAPER MONEY FOR BUSINESS?

Hon. E. N. Rhodus announces that a reduction of half of one per cent will be made in the interest rate paid on savings deposits in chartered banks and post offices by the Ontario Government savings office. He further intimates that the same reduction will be made in the rate paid by some important loan and trust companies which are authorized to accept deposits.

The rate formerly paid on savings deposits was three per cent. It was reduced a year ago to 2½ per cent, and is now to come down to two per cent. A clear reduction of one per cent in the rate paid to depositors; or of 3½ per cent to those accepting deposits.

Those who borrow from the banks and other deposit-taking institutions will expect, and will be entitled to expect, a corresponding reduction in the rate they have to pay on loans.

The former reduction of ½ per cent in the rate paid on savings deposits was the result of a powers from these institutions. But a cut of a full one per cent in the deposit rate would be without justification or apparent purpose unless the loan rate were reduced in like ratio.

A reduction of one per cent in the interest rates would relieve the "overhead" burden upon industrial and trading concerns of all kinds. A reduction of 1½ in the interest charged on loans, which is the amount of the reduction in the interest paid to depositors, would have a correspondingly greater effect in stimulating business activity.

SIDE-LIGHTS

Ottawa is sending cheques of $135,000 to Manitoba, $20,000 to Saskatchewan, $100,000 to Alberta, $40,000 to British Columbia, $25,000 to New Brunswick, $40,000 to Nova Scotia and $25,000 to Newfoundland. The total monthly contributions to the cost of paying off the unemployed. The officials haven't got through adding up the amounts required by Ontario and Quebec.

What do the depression do?

If the banks sent to the public institutions are far out in line with the actual requirements as the "lump sum" grants to Alberta cities, these should be 25 per cent larger than they are.

Where does Ottawa get the notion that Alberta needs only half the money required by Saskatchewan or British Columbia?

And what has become of the prosperity that was said to have returned to the Maritimes, since the three small provinces there, with a joint population of only one million, require more than $100,000 a month federal aid to take care of their unemployed?

INSECURITY COMES HIGH

Premier Musolini says relations between European countries have become better since the disarmament conference was talked out. How much better, or in what respect the betterment is shown, does not explain. From a distance, it would be to look upon as unpleasant as they ever were, or ever could be, except in war time.

Duce is not a believer in the holding qualities of disarmament treaties. He expects that human nature is pretty much what it has been, and that people are only "scraps of paper" when nations are swept by suspicion or fired by the lust of conquest.

The heads of most European governments are of the same mind, though they are less frank in saying so. With the taxpayers of that countries would not know how whether the members of the parliament believe they can go on building armament on a competitive quantity basis without bankrupting all the countries concerned.

Europe is not building its armaments out of revenue but out of capital. Germany at the end of the war was not worth the $53,000,000,000 of war debt charged against it. How long before the point will be reached where the soul of Europe is not worth the armament created to protect it?

DEFLATE THE OVERHEAD

The city council is considering a proposal that the Provincial Government be asked to impose a tax on all real estate in unincorporated areas, including interest and dividends, and turn the proceeds over to the cities.

Many years ago a tax was imposed on the unearned increment of real estate values. There hasn't been any increment in Edmonton real estate values for twenty years. That may be coincidence, but it is also instructive.

A tax on dividends, which are conspicuously scarce, would not help the city treasury very much. Nor would it encourage the main manufacturing and extraction industries, the main hope that unemployment in its present proportions is not to be a permanent condition.

Taxing interest on private loans in this city or that one probably would not help to make much more available here for building loans, the one hope that unemployed builders will get back at work and that the assessable value of city property will go up.

What Edmonton is not is new schemes whereby, directly or indirectly, more money is taken from the public purse than is given to the city. The need is that the impossible overhead the city is carrying be scaled down, so that the ample revenue now being collected will not be frittered away in paying double interest on any development. That is what council should ask the legislature to do and do it forthwith.

The provincial government—by imposing a tax on these head interest payments and re-taking the money to the city—can reduce Edmonton's tax rate 10 mills, without doing injury to any business, and without discouraging any branch of industrial or business activity development. That is what council should ask the legislature to do and do it forthwith.

Morals are a matter of latitude and longitude. They grow out of the economic urgencies of the time. What is highly moral in one place at one time may be highly immoral in another place or at another time. Freedoms of speech, of assembly, of religion, of political democracy, but when democracy is threatened by war, the freedom of the subject gives way to the state's need for soldiers. Murder, the most abhorrent of crimes in days of peace, becomes then a justifiable offence in time of war.

Canada's real estate and insurance man will defend real estate organization wholesale killings of the enemy as given a title and emoluments and honors such as he could never have achieved through beautiful sub-divisions or protecting a million homes against the loss of their breadwinners.

Lotteries—except for church purposes—have been regarded as highly immoral by British people. Both in England and in Canada it has been declared a criminal offence to conduct a lottery.

Only Years Bring Welcome Freedom

We all dread age and put up the best fight we can against it. We are not afraid of starvation for the sake of looks. We know that we would rather die than look old. We could not drink water if the secret of the number of birthdays we have celebrated, and no compliment we esteem so highly as to be told we look young, and no insult that we are old.

If our secret of what age we would like to have, we would remain perpetually in the 20s. In fact, many women are static at 20 years old. We are not young, but perhaps we can go on the top of the 30s without a little cold chill in our hearts and the feeling that we are leaving the best of life behind.

For a generation has grown up about youth that we believe in as devoutly and with as little basis in fact as bakes do Santa Claus, that causes us to think that youth is a period of unending fun and pleasure. The world is full of sunshine and when we grow older we pass from this smiling land of sunshine into a world of clouds. We are not young, but perhaps we have even lost our power of enjoyment. We can all recall how, when we were in our teens, we pitied aged people in their 30s who had nothing left in the way of pleasure and fun. And when we were in our 20s, we wondered if that anybody could even desire to live beyond 60.

As we grow older, however, we find out that this sympathy is misplaced. We are not old, but we are not young. We should pity us but that should pity youth. For, to quote Browning's "How Do You Do?" life is the last, for which the first was made. For it takes us half a lifetime to learn how to live.

Youth isn't the happiest time of life. It is the most miserable time of life. It has no perspective, no sense of value. We have not found out that nothing is worth the effort of getting. There is a lack of compensation that always works, and we have not found out that there is which to meet the disappointment of existence.

But age is emancipation. When you are old you can do exactly as you like to do. You can sit in a chair, eat a sandwich and add enough cold water to make soup.

Cook three meals a day and add something special. You will find this makes a delicious soup, and you need not add meat.

Do you throw away the bones left from a roast? The next time do so. Instead, wash them in a fashion plate or wear your old clothes. You can say what you will, but it's a sweet and artful camouflager. And the most that will be said about you is that you are eccentric.

So considering all these things about the furthering of beauty, here's a perfect gift idea for what we want to do and leaving undone that we have done. It is that we dress age. How strange! Is it that we are to be like a fifteen-year-old some day? What a mistake not to run out and meet it instead of pushing it away as long as we can?
